- Linear and timed sections
- No gore or violence
- Survival horror with stealth and strategy

It's about 7pm on Friday and you are headed to your next delivery destination. You work for Timmy Thom's Fast Sandwiches and tonight your job is to deliver sandwiches from 4pm to 11pm. Your next stop is an interesting location. It is some sort of crime research facility where evidence from crime scenes around town is processed and stored.

What you didn't know, was that three very strange dolls were recently brought there for processing and storage. These dolls aren't ordinary; they have a mind of their own. Your night is about to take a turn for the worse, and it will be one of the strangest and scariest nights of your life.

Emily Wants to Play Too is a survival horror game with stealth and strategy elements about a sandwich delivery guy that gets locked inside an evidence processing and storage office building by living dolls. The dolls have "work" to do here and are gathering new friends. They didn't expect you to show up, so don't get in their way. Throughout the night you will be looking for an exit out of the office. At some point, Emily will join in on the fun, along with the dolls' new "friends". You better play their games or else! Learn what you have to do and be on the lookout for a way to escape.

. Interesting Idea

+Okay Price

-Badly developed

-Guns feel like peashooters

-Gives an achievement "Headshot!" But headshots do as much damage as bodyshots.

-Not good

Decent price, interesting Idea, terribly made. Nothing in this game feels good aside from the idea. It's like you're shooting a Nerf gun and your enemies fall down because they pity you.

. Fun game. Took me about half an hour to go through all three levels. Very easy, and the story is basically non-existent, but the game has a good atmosphere. I thought it was worth the price I paid for it, at least.. A dull, poor man's Puzzle Quest. I only bought it because it was on sale and those PQ games were/are still at a high price point. In this game you battle with yourself... that's it! There's no competition with the computer even in the so-called 'campaign', no skirmish mode, no multiplayer, nothing! It's ridiculous cause even Tetris on the NES had a mode were you could battle the AI and that was my favorite thing to do, same thing in Puzzle Quest, going through the campaign, defeating the ever increasing AI. Also, the way you 'battle' is not intuitive as Puzzle Quest's, the way of handling the chain reactions isn't either. At the end, this is nothing more than a sugar coated Bejeweled. Don't fall for it!. Meh, not a fan. Gamepad support feels kinda wonky. I can see the appeal of a classic game but just not my cup of tea!. my friend hacked my account and used my credit card to buy this, 100% worth it. I got this game as part of a bundle with Rusty Lake Hotel during a sale, and I would say it was definitely worth it. The narrative was gripping, the puzzles not stupidly hard, and round about the right length of time for a point and click game. I can't wait to see what game they release next!

List of things that this community uses unironically:

- xD
- Eurobeat
- :3. As someone who has followed the game ever since it was shown off as a prototype, and who caved and bought it very early into Early Access, I have yet to regret my purchase.

Updates are constant and deliver both on the developers' promises and the players' wishes/suggestions, and the game only gets better with time.

The asking 20$ price is reasonable for the game in its' current state, and you are going to get hours of enjoyment out of it - if you enjoy tycoon games or cooking simulations, that is.

And if you ever have a complaint/bug/suggestion, the developers' team is very active on their official Discord, and replies to pretty much anyone who has something to say. Haven't seen such good player/developer interaction in a long time.

I thoroughly recommend this game to anyone who has some experience with tycoon, likes cooking and isn't afraid of trial and error. And if you're still skeptical, come back when it's fully released and I'm sure the final product will be even better, and still worth the money.. Gameplay is *extremely* minimal, I don't know that there is much of any strategy to it, really.

Wish I hadn't bought it.... love the route to drive on wasting what the particular train burns.. This skin contains flashy rainbows and dubsteps of d00m.

Yep.. Very fun addicting indie game. great controller support.. Wow I've just finished my first playthrough and it's really gripping. I love these types of games, which was what drew me to this game.

You play Daphne who has just inherited her grandmothers house and is leaving her old life behind to try and start again. However her family name causes a stir in the town and leads to interesting developments. You then have to try and figure out your families mysterious past all at the same time as trying to save your home from those who want to take it from you. The choices you make will change Daphne and the way others look at you. This includes her personallity and appearance.

Your choices effect Daphne are split into categories such as The Globe, The Moon, The Star and The Sun. One or two of these will be influenced by your choices. The game states that there are no good or bad choices they just effect how people and you look at yourself.

The artwork in the game is stunning some of it looks like painting that I would gladly hang up.

I would recommend this to anyone who loves visual novels and choice based games.. It was a difficult decision to give this game a thumbs down, when I would, on a non-binary rating system, give it a passing, yet slightly below average score. A scoring bug and a clunky UI were the deciding factors.

Pros:

- Graphically appealing, the best of the genre that I have tried.
- Supports 4K resolutions.

Cons:

- (Bug) The scoring system is FUBAR in higher difficulties. Nothing like clearing a high difficulty tileset and receiving a score of minus 24 million and some change.

- (Usability) It is impossible to judge the height of stacks without moving the camera, and the mouse responsiveness is bad. Repositioning the camera is much harder than it should be. I've played much more user-friendly 2D MajJong programs.. Yeah it's good. Look past the graphics and how broken parry is and enjoy the rich story and tactical gameplay and all that jazz.. I like hard games, but this game is not just hard, but frustrating by design. Enemy reaction times are insane and peaking around corners comes down to whose gun side is closer to a peaking position. It took me 30 minutes to get trough first handful of rooms and was left extremely frustrated at how much polish this game needs. On top of that the games artstyle leaves alot up for guessing when items and enemies seemlesly melt to the floor and some major butgs like when the game decides to let bullets trough walls and let enemies track you trough walls. This game can hardly be called Hotline miami clone due to it failing to reach the standard set in any any way. Has potential, but needs more polish and some systems reworking.
